JUDGE GRINNAN HAS ACUTE APPENDICITIS

Successful Operation Performed
Last Night at Memorial Hospital.

CONDITION IS FAVORABLE

Attack Sunday Followed by Severe Pain Yesterday Morning.

Judge Daniel Grinnan, of the Chancery Court, suffered a serious attack of appendicitis yesterday morning, and at 8 o'clock last night was operated on at the Memorial Hospital by Dr. J. Shelton Horsley. The operation was successful, although at midnight the patient was still considered to be in a serious condition, but with chances in favor of his recovery.

Judge Grinnan had his first attack last August, but it disappeared, and it was believed that there would be no further trouble. But on Sunday there was a repetition of the attack, and he complained frequently of pains in his side. Nevertheless, he attended court on Monday and Tuesday, only giving up yesterday when it became evident that an operation would be necessary.

Walked to Ambulance. Although suffering intensely, Judge Grinnan walked down a flight of steps at his home, 205 West Gate Street, and entered the hospital ambulance unassisted. His repeated statements that his condition was not serious, and that he would soon be over the attack, created the impression that the case would not prove an aggravated one, but the appendix was found to be very much inflamed. He remained in the operating-room more than an hour, and, though he did not rally readily, there was later a change for the better, which encourages the belief that he will recover rapidly.

Judge Grinnan was also attended by his brother, Dr. St. George Grinnan, who remained at his bedside until all immediate danger had passed. The Chancery Court opens this Monday, and Governor Swanson will be asked to-day to designate some judge to sit in Judge Grinnan's stead. Even at the best, it will be some weeks before he can return to his duties.

SHOW PROSPEROUS YEAR

Returns Compiled by Chamber of Commerce Indicate Business Revival.

Return from the inquiries sent out by the Chamber of Commerce to various business organizations for reports on capital investment, the sale and number of people employed during 1909 show a more gratifying result. All responses, with rare exceptions, indicate healthy conditions and substantial increases over 1908.

A general inquiry from the retail merchants shows that that class of business had the best holiday season in many years. Several firms give figures, demonstrating that their business had far exceeded that of 1907.

The January term of the Chancery Court opens this Monday, and Governor Swanson will be asked to-day to designate some judge to sit in Judge Grinnan's stead. Even at the best, it will be some weeks before he can return to his duties.

WILL VISIT ORPHANS

Santa Claus Scheduled to Greet Mrs. Gill's

Santa Claus' excursion, not Captain's excursion, will be made for the benefit of the orphan's fund. The excursion will leave at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Gill is preparing a warm reception for him, and the boys are getting their hasty luncheon into their stomachs for the holiday welcome which will greet the patron saint of Yuletide.

It is expected that Governor Swanson will present a check for $100 from the orphan's fund. The excursion will be an especial invitation has been extended to him. Rev. John Halliwell Dickinson will make an appropriate talk. In addition there will be songs and recitations by the boys, and the whole event will be very pleasant for the wards of Mrs. Gill.

RAILWAY MEN TO CELEBRATE

Moving pictures will be shown by means of a machine which has been specially put in for this purpose. There will be various social features and a distribution of Christmas candy.

RAID FIVE STILL NEAR CHAPEL HILL

Reports Received by Revenue Agent Indicate Whiskey Was Made by Wholesale.

VIOLATOR IS ARRESTED

Deputy Collectors in North Carolina Kept Busy Suppressing Illegal Liquor Traffic.

Reports received by Revenue Agent William H. Chapman from Deputy Collector Merritt, whose territory includes Durham county, N. C., indicate that illicit whiskey manufacturers have been unusually busy this fall and early winter near Chapel Hill, and it is believed that the students at the University of North Carolina have had little difficulty in procuring intoxicating liquors, despite laws prohibiting their sale. In the arrest of John Chambliss, Deputy Merritt believes that he has done much to prevent the further operations of stills in the immediate vicinity of the university.

Five distillery sites, according to Deputy Merritt's report, were found in a day's search, and Chambliss's house is said to have been well stocked with fresh corn whiskey, and apparatus and materials to continue in the business for some time to come.

William Chambliss, father of the man under arrest, is believed to have known that whiskey was being made on his place, but nothing was found to connect him with the violation of the law. John Chambliss was bailed in the sum of $500 for his appearance before the January term of the United States District Court, in Raleigh.

Fourteen Seizures in Dry State.

In December my men are especially on the alert," said Colonel Chapman yesterday. "Every man that knows how to manufacture whiskey seems to start out afresh." Colonel Chapman's territory includes Eastern Virginia and North Carolina, but thus far, since December 20, agents in Virginia have reported no seizures, whereas four have been made and forwarded to the department from North Carolina. "This is not unusual," says the agent. "We expect to find illicit stills where the manufacture of whiskey is prohibited."

Agents of the revenue department will be the chief witnesses for the government at the next term of the Raleigh court, when it is understood more than 100 men will be tried for engaging illegally in the whiskey traffic. Although few arrests have been made by the revenue agents in North Carolina, there are many warrants sworn out, and it seldom results that a man who has engaged to any extent in the manufacture of distilled spirits escapes the law.

Since Christmas Day, which even the revenue men celebrate as a holiday, employees of the department working from the Richmond office have reported seven seizures. Deputies Holland and Adams started out from Dunn, N. C., on Monday, and after a few hours' search destroyed three stills and arrested H. H. Stewart and J. H. Thelton, who were making whiskey for the operation of plants. Both men were taken before a commissioner and bailed for their appearance in court.

Illicit Stills Are Numerous. "In Eastern North Carolina," says Colonel Chapman, "the stills are as numerous as the noses of the people. They are not of them. These men are very cautious and live in constant dread of a surprise. In our searches we confiscate and destroy many thousands of gallons of whiskey, and there is no telling how much money is represented in the apparatus of the stills. It is safe to say that the revenue men are safe to say that we find barrels of whiskey hidden in bushes, which indicates that the agents have been seen in their approach and that the fugitives have taken advantage of a chance to get away."

Seizures have been made recently in the counties of Rockingham, Dunn, Harnett, Nash, Chatham, Durham and Johnston. In North Carolina, and reports indicate that other operators are under suspicion, and that the next few days may see the making of one of the largest seizures in the history of the local revenue agent's office.

LEARD'S MADE DISTRICT AGENT

Seaboard Air Line Railway Announces Promotions of Richmond Men.

H. S. Leard, who, for two past five years has been district passenger agent of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, with headquarters in this city, has been promoted to district passenger agent in charge of Virginia and North Carolina with headquarters in Raleigh.

R. Vaughan-Lloyd, who has been city passenger agent in the Richmond office, has been promoted to traveling passenger agent, and will remain with headquarters here, and will report to Mr. Leard.

James Ker, Jr., city passenger agent in Charlotte, N. C., has been promoted to traveling passenger agent with headquarters in Charlotte.

J. P. Mitchell, ticket agent in Raleigh, has been promoted to passenger agent in that city.

Mr. Leard has been four years with the Seaboard Air Line, starting out as a very young man as a conductor. Mr. Leard is well known as a most courteous and efficient passenger agent. During the five years he has been in Richmond, he has become universally popular, and has been of great service to his company. Mr. Vaughan-Lloyd entered the office of the Seaboard Air Line under Mr. Leard about three years ago as ticket agent.

These changes will become effective January 1, about which time Mr. Leard expects to move his family from his home on Floyd Avenue to Raleigh.

At the Home for Incurables. At the Virginia Home for Incurables Christmas was pleasantly celebrated. A dinner was given the inmates by Colonel and Mrs. Murphy, and in the evening there was a Christmas tree party, the kind thought of the superintendent and nurses. Each inmate was given a present by Santa Claus. Then there were songs of a humorous nature. Many of the friends of the inmates were present to enjoy the occasion.

BOYS GAVE THEIR BONFIRE MONEY

Fourth Street Gang Turned Barrel Fund Over to Salvation Army.

From Fourth Street comes a bright story of the real Christmas spirit. Some of the boys who live there took up a collection last week for a bonfire, but just on the eve of the day when they might revel in its joyous light, they decided to give up the money they had secured to their less fortunate little brothers. They called it "The Fourth Street Boys' Offering," and they gave it to Captain Fowler, of the Salvation Army, who used it for the happy Christmas of some poor boys who might otherwise have had no Christmas joy.

According to the preliminary statement of the Salvation Army, issued last night, more than 1,500 hungry and needy people sat down to the Christmas dinner of the army. Four hundred and fifty baskets and bags were also given out.

Not a single person was turned away from the old High School Building on Christmas morning without dinner. And so much was left over that sixty families living in the poorest section of the city were able to dine in good cheer on the remainder.

Not in vain did the sentiment of the army stand in appeal by the "boiling pots" on the streets. More than $800 was realized from contributions dropped in by passers-by. On Christmas Eve, Mrs. Fowler stood by the pot in the Post-Office, and when she emptied it there was more than $100 in it.

A touching testimonial of the good work done by the Salvation Army was the coming to Captain Fowler of two score men who thanked him for the baskets given to their families last year and added him in his efforts this year. Many of these men are still in the positions secured for them by the army.

LEAD DEFENDS NEW CLEAR WATER PLANT

Health Officer Scouts Idea of Epidemic of Indigestion as Imaginary.

CLEAR WATER IS FAR BETTER

Says Hard Drinker Would Not Get Enough Alum to Raise Ordinary Biscuit.

Reports published yesterday to the effect that numerous citizens were suffering from strange gastrointestinal troubles, which were laid to the door of the settling basin and alum recently put into commission, have brought forth a spirited reply from Health Officer E. C. Levy. He claims that if even the worst case of indigestion is caused by the alum, the possibility of any harm resulting from the clarifying process, this time—only a few days after Christmas—is most inopportune to bring it out, since there are few who have fully recovered from the common overindulgences of the season.

This aside, however, he states from the viewpoint of a scientific man, that the proportion of alum used in clearing the water could not possibly have as much effect on the consumer as a single biscuit made from the average baking powder, even if much more than the usual amount of water were in the plant, and believes that it will do all that has been claimed for it in the way of clearing water without injuring the internal workings of any citizen.

Following is Dr. Levy's reply to the criticisms: "The article which I read in an afternoon paper to-day is the first suggestion that I have heard of any undue prevalence of digestive disturbances among the people of Richmond. As simple disturbances of digestion are not, of course, among the diseases which a doctor is called upon to report to the Health Department, it may be quite true that there is an unusual amount of trouble of this kind without my having heard of it.

Water Not Cause. "However, it might be so, I can certainly see no reason for attributing it to the settling basin. Before it could be shown that water was causing trouble, it would be necessary to investigate a considerable number of alleged cases along lines which, for example, we follow at the Health Department, in connection with typhoid fever. I do not hesitate to say that work of that kind is distinctly not in the province of a practicing physician, and that a doctor should be called upon to report to the Health Department, it may be quite true that there is an unusual amount of trouble of this kind without my having heard of it.

"In the matter of indigestion, it should be shown by careful investigation that such prevalence of digestive disturbances really does exist, and that it is not a mere fancy. The bottom of it, I would then feel that we should be profoundly thankful that the basins were put in operation, and that they are doing a very good job. I do not hesitate to say that the basins in operation is far better than without them. The water from the basins has caused trouble, we may be certain that the trouble would have been far greater if the water had not been cleared. The consumer without passing through the basins.

"Although I have not been in the practice of medicine for many years, I presume that people still suffer as my former patients did from indigestion in eating and drinking at the basins. I do not hesitate to say that the basins were put in operation, and that they are doing a very good job. I do not hesitate to say that the basins in operation is far better than without them. The water from the basins has caused trouble, we may be certain that the trouble would have been far greater if the water had not been cleared. The consumer without passing through the basins.

"As to the question of whether adding a grain or two of alum per gallon of water would cause such digestive trouble, this theory is absolutely untenable. In the first place, as has been explained over and over again, the water that is added to the basins is not the water that is added to the basins. It is added to James River water, and the resulting hydroxide of aluminum quickly settles out of the water.

But even if it failed to settle out completely, the amount which any one would get in a week, even if he drank for more than a week, would be less than what he would get in a single biscuit made with most baking powder.

Regarding my visit to the settling basin, I would like to state that I had nothing at all to do with any questions of this kind. For the past week I have been planning with Mr. Ezekiel, who is in charge of the basins, to spend several hours with him looking into a number of matters of interest. Having my conduct a large series of experiments in connection with James River water, it is but natural that I should wish to see just how things are going.

Clear Water Vainly Better. "It is greatly to be regretted that such prominence should have been given to the water from the basins, and that the water should be condemned of the settling basins, and that with an utter lack of such evidence as would be demanded by the basins. Those of us who have followed the question of these basins for a long period of years are not misled into believing that the water is bad, but we are very certain that they will give us vastly better water than we have previously had, both from the standpoint of appearance and sanitary quality. Certainly they will not give us worse water, or water that can cause even the most delicate indigestion on account of any result brought about by the treatment to which the water is subjected.

Many Imaginary Ills. "Imaginary ill is a play a prominent part in such matters. For example, we have had quite a number of complaints at the office of the Health Department during the past three years from persons who said that the taste of alum in our city water was so strong that they were afraid to drink it. Yet the first water that ever came into Richmond through the basins was just a week ago today."

CENSUS ARMY MOVES APRIL 15

Supervisor Ridgway Moore Tells of Preliminary Tests for Enumerators.

MAY EMPLOY MANY WOMEN

Accurate Details to Be Gathered by Government Agents on Many Subjects.

By January 25 all applications for positions as enumerators for this district, in the thirteenth decennial United States census, must be filed with Supervisor C. Ridgway Moore. Cards will be sent out to applicants notifying them where they must apply for a "test," before February 5. Examinations will be held on that date in every one of the 320 supervisor's districts.

Between February 5 and February 22 the supervisors will go through the papers, satisfy themselves as to the qualifications of those who have passed and make their designations or recommendations to Census Director Durand, at Washington. The commissions of enumerators will not be issued until the director has approved the papers.

Supervisor Moore yesterday received information that the department expects to have the army of 67,000 enumerators picked, tested, designated and commissioned by the middle or latter part of March. From then until April 15 the supervisors will send out precaution will be taken to avoid mistakes. The supervisors for Virginia are as follows:

First District, William W. Woodward, Hampton, Elizabeth City county; Second District, Richard P. Bunting, Portsmouth, Norfolk county; Third District, C. Ridgway Moore, Richmond, Henrico county; Fourth District, William A. Land, Blackstone, Nottoway county; Fifth District, Sidney F. Landreth, Hillsville, Carroll county; Sixth District, Edward C. Burks, Bedford County, Bedford county; Seventh District, Everett D. Ott, Harrisonburg, Rockingham county; Eighth District, Albert E. Richter, Warrenton, Patrick county; Ninth District, John C. Smith, Clintwood, Dickinson county; Tenth District, James M. D. Adair, Lexington, Rockbridge county.

"The simple test which candidates for enumerators' places will undergo does not take away the supervisors' right and the census law to designate suitable persons for such positions," said Supervisor of Census C. Ridgway Moore yesterday.

"It is designated to aid the supervisors in the exercise of that discretion and to enable the Census Director intelligently to use the power of approval of the census law to designate suitable persons for such positions," said Supervisor of Census C. Ridgway Moore yesterday.

"The census will be taken, not by the Census Bureau officers or the supervisors, but by the enumerators. They are the ones who come in contact with the people and get the facts. Unless every single enumerator does his whole and proper duty there cannot be a correct census."

"There cannot be anything of greater scientific value to this country than accurate statistics as the basis of a study of the people and the facts. Unless every single enumerator does his whole and proper duty there cannot be a correct census."

"All persons, unless specifically disqualified, are entitled to apply to take the test. Only those under eighteen years of age and over seventy, and those who have not become citizens of the United States, are barred. Otherwise, all persons, regardless of sex and political affiliations, are eligible."

"It is left to my judgment whether it is wise to appoint women in my district. They can do the work as well as men, and they are certainly a good many employed all over the country in the twelfth census."

Instructions to Applicants. "The time for closing the consideration of applications is January 25. Those who have not applied by that date will be ignored. Applications should be addressed in writing to me at this office, and not to the Census Director. I will send inquiries the necessary form and instructions concerning it."

"Afterward I will send those on the list to the test, a set of directions for filling out the test papers. This will enable every one to come well prepared. Nothing could be fairer or better calculated to insure a satisfactory applicant passing the test."

"The test will be held at one of the public schools with common sense and a common school education can pass it. All it consists of is giving the candidates sample population and agricultural schedules, upon which are to be written in the proper columns the required details, which are found in typical families and farms supposed to be in a district. There will be some instances requiring the exercise of judgment to decide whether a given entry should be made under one or another heading or another. You can see how simple and elementary it is."

Tests in Every District. "The test will be held all over the country and in every supervisor's district February 5. There will be several places in each district for taking the test. One place would be insufficient. As supervisor, I shall have the direction of all, and the test examination at each, no matter under what official agency it is held, will be that of the Census Director."

"If an given until February 22 to rate the papers in a very simple way and to gain an idea of the qualifications of those rated as having passed. Next I will forward the papers of the successful candidates, with my recommendations or designations, to the Census Director."

April 15 the census army will move forward in the enumeration."

PANNOED OVERCOAT THOUGH FREEZING

Craze for Whiskey Leads Two Men to Desperate Act on Winter Night.

Despite the fact that the thermometer was eleven degrees below freezing point, two well-known characters of the lower walks of life in Richmond dared a pawnshop on Sixth Street last night, so that one of the duo could pawn his overcoat for a couple of dollars to spend in drink.

"Gimme $2," said the leader. "I want some whiskey and I ain't got it." He threw off his coat as he entered the door, and flung it through the little windowed window. The overcoat had been there before, and it seemed to know the place.

"Gimme a ticket, and hang the coat on the rack. I'm coming back for it some fine day."

"You better keep your coat," said the pawnbroker. "It's cold as blazes outside to-night."

"Better on the two spot," replied the other. "I want something to drink. My friend and I are going to have a time to-night, an' we need the mon'." Han' it over."

The pawnbroker demurred, but seeing the determination of the two men, forked out the coin, and passed it through the window. He placed the ticket in a small envelope.

"Looks like one of them coke envelopes," said the pawnbroker. "Let's go and get some electricity. I was speaking of an eighth of an ounce of cocaine, and many a snuff of the drug he is said to have taken."

"Better on your money in the envelope and keep it," said the pawnbroker. But the other laughed merrily.

"Us for the booze and a good time, an' if we don't come back there won't be no tears an' no flowers, an' you'll have the coat. So long." He pocketed the $2, and he and his friend departed for the good time they had promised themselves. And the thermometer was down to 21 degrees Fahrenheit.

Captain Pollock Has Sixty-Horse Power Animal for Sale.

Captain George Pollock, secretary of the Board of Police Commissioners, has another auction sale impending. Again it is a mule. The mule was found recently in the eastern part of the city, and was locked up on a charge of vagrancy. There may be other charges, but they will be against the Police Board for the mule's feed. Therefore the department is anxious to rid itself of the aforesaid mule, which is black in color, with long ears, four swiftly moving pedals and a loud bray. The mule is about the size of a prime mover. He is sixty-horse power in his hind pedals, and he could kick a battleship out of its socket. He's a some mule, that mule is."

"What I don't know about a mule," he said, "ain't no knowing. This animal is one bought by the government during the Civil War, and he's a prime mover. He's sixty-horse power in his hind pedals, and he could kick a battleship out of its socket. He's a some mule, that mule is."

Roommate Will Not Prosecute Charge of Stealing Shoes.

BAREFOOT WOMAN CALLS FOR POLICE

Mrs. Kouch Runs Through Snow to Escape Drunken Husband.

With her clothing torn to shreds, her hair hanging in tangles and in bare feet, Mrs. Eva Kouch, of 217 North Eighteenth Street, ran excitedly into the First Police Station last night and begged for assistance against her husband, John.

"John too much drunk," she cried in her broken English. "John too much killy me," and she looked at if John had been too much drunk and had been obsessed with the idea of destroying his consort. As an officer put it, the woman didn't have enough clothing on her to wad a gun. Her shoulders were bare, and she had on little more than her skirt. In her bare feet she had run about three squares, but her excitement and her terror served her to the cold. Sergeant Holdcroft, who was in charge of the station, tried to hold the desperate woman while Officer Atkinson went for her shoes and more clothing, but she had taken time to yearn out a warrant against her John, and Officer Atkinson followed her. John was found as his wife had described him—"too much drunk" and he was locked up in the station, where he snoozed peacefully.

Later Mrs. Kouch, dressed in her finest, and with a fine silk headkerchief around her head, a bright-colored shawl, and other necessary clothes and a good pair of shoes, returned to the station to pay the magistrate his fee. Kouch and his wife are Russians, and, judging by their knowledge of English language, they have not been long in this country. Indeed, Mrs. Kouch's acquaintance with the English tongue, seemed to extend no further than the words "too much killy me." When they questioned her she renigked. Some time ago she had her husband arrested on the charge of beating her.
